23. 다음 글에서 필자가 주장하는 바로 가장 적절한 것은?

Mike Michalowicz, the author of The Pumpkin Plan, argues that comedians are the ultimate public speakers. For example, comedians have to hold an audience's attention for an hour or more, they don't get a break during their presentation, and they can't rely on the audience for a Q&A. They are also expected to make the audience laugh constantly. And they don't even get to use presentation software programs, because they want the audience looking at them, not trying to read a screen. These facts don't mean you need to be a comedian on stage to perform well. You aren't even required to tell jokes. To enhance your own presentations, however, start to observe the techniques comedians use, and employ them in your own speech.

25. 다음 글의 요지로 가장 적절한 것은?

The image of the self-sacrificing parent is often considered an ideal. The good father lives for his children at all costs. The good mother never takes a break and has no outside friendships or activities. Is this the ideal? In fact, the opposite is true. Overextended parents are often annoyed and depressed. Just as you can't keep driving a car without ever refilling the gas, you can't keep giving to kids without ever refueling emotionally. An afternoon out with friends for lunch can help you get refreshed. Even an hour alone in the tub with a good book can also make you emotionally relaxed. In this way, you can take care of your children with more energy, interest, and patience.

Surfing is often thought of as a male sport, but in fact women have been surfing in California since the early 1920s and today there are women surfers in every surfing country in the world. Like men, they range from amateurs to professionals. Though women may not have been taken seriously in surf contests, these days they compete because they have truly earned that right. One of the earliest women surfers was Mary Hawkins, who showed very graceful form in the surf. She was the first in a long line which stretched down in the 1960s, to Marge Calhoun and her daughters, and Linda Benson, followed by some of the top professional surfers today.

As you climb higher and higher, the amount of oxygen in the atmosphere decreases. When people from lower areas visit areas of high altitude, they may suffer from altitude sickness; the ① lack of oxygen makes them feel tired, dizzy, and sick. People living in high altitudes are able to breathe ② normally because their bodies have become used to the shortage of oxygen. This also means that athletes from those areas can achieve ③ outstanding performances at lower altitudes. When mountaineers attempt to climb high peaks, they ④ get altitude sickness by climbing to one level and then resting for a few days. This gives their bodies time to ⑤ adapt to the lack of oxygen before climbing even higher.

For three days, the air around Nya's home was filled with the sound of the drilling looking for clean water. On the third afternoon, Nya joined the other children gathered around the drill site. The adults stopped working and came there, too. The workers seemed excited. They were moving quickly as their leader called out orders. Then—WHOOSH! A spray of water shot high into the air! This was new water—water that was coming out of the hole! Everyone cheered at the sight of the water. A woman in the crowd began singing a song of celebration. Nya clapped her hands along with all the other children. But as Nya watched the water spraying out of the hole, she frowned. The water wasn't clear. It was brown and heavy-looking. 34. Most people, when trying to persuade others, do too much talking themselves. If you disagree with someone else, give them time to talk. They also have strong opinions like you do. So you should ask them questions. Let them tell you a few things. If you disagree with them, you may be tempted to interrupt. But you shouldn't. It is dangerous. They won't pay attention to you while they still have a lot of ideas of their own they want to express. So _____ patiently and with an open mind. Encourage them to express their ideas fully.

- ① work ② study ③ listen
 ④ explain ⑤ challenge

35. Educating consumers is important because people can have great power over how goods are made and sold, depending on what they choose to buy. This power is sometimes shown through campaigns and boycotts, when people refuse to buy certain food products. For instance, thousands of dolphins used to be killed in tuna fishing nets, but _____ helped to change this practice. Tuna that was caught without harming dolphins was labeled "dolphin friendly" so consumers wouldn't buy other tuna products. This forced many companies to change their method of fishing. As a result, dolphin deaths decreased by over 80 percent between 1990 and 2000. [3점]

 ③ animal instincts ④ consumer pressure

36. Consider a study of the power of social standards, involving nearly three hundred households in San Marcos, California. All of the households were informed about how much energy they had used in previous weeks; they were also given information about the average use of energy by households in their neighborhood. The effects on behavior were both clear and striking. In the following weeks, the above-average energy users greatly decreased their energy use; the below-average energy users greatly increased their energy use. The latter finding is called a boomerang effect, and it offers an important warning. If you want to encourage people to have socially desirable behavior, do not let them know that their current actions _____ . [3점]

In 1733, Philippe Rameau was considered one of the top French composers of his time. He made a long lasting and significant impact on the theory and various trends of music. (B)

Now think about blogging. The number of blogs out there is amazing, and it seems that almost everyone has a blog or is thinking about starting one. Why are blogs so popular? Not only is it because so many people have the desire to write, it is also because blogs have two features that distinguish them from other forms of writing. First, they provide the hope that someone else will read one's writing. After all, the moment a blogger presses the "publish" button, the blog can be consumed by anybody in the world, and with so many people connected, somebody, or at least a few people, should stumble upon the blog. Indeed, the "number of views" statistic is a highly motivating feature in the blog world because it lets the blogger know exactly how many people have at least seen the posting. Blogs also provide readers with the ability to leave their reactions and comments — satisfying both the blogger and the reader. Most blogs have very _____ — perhaps only the blogger's mother or best friend reads them — but even writing for one person, compared to writing for nobody, seems to be enough to encourage millions of people to blog.
