This is the name of a modern disease which became violent in the late 1980s and is still spreading. It is carried by a germ called prosperity. Its symptoms are easily recognizable. The patient grows restless in the early spring and starts collecting a lot of information about places he intends to visit and studying air or road routes. Then he makes the rounds of clothes shops, shoe shops, and sport shops spending much more than he can afford. Finally in August, the patient boards a plane, train, coach or car and proceeds to foreign countries along with thousands of fellow sufferers.

24. A study in Britain has tracked 17,000 children since their birth. In 2004, Ann Buchanan and Eirini Flouri published the results of that tracking in the British Journal of Educational Psychology. They looked at children whose fathers helped care for them. Those fathers usually read to them, took them on outings and took an interest in their children's education. The children did better in school and later in life and were less likely to get into trouble with the police or to have mental health problems. Besides, they were more apt to form stable relationships. "Dad's _____ lays the ground for a lot of good things later on," says Buchanan.

25. Place names have always been changing; nearly every place in the world used to be called something else. But the pace has accelerated dramatically in recent years, leaving map makers constantly trying to catch up. And behind nearly every name change lies the desire to _____. There are many examples of nations trying to distance themselves from their colonial era. Rhodesia, whose name was made to celebrate a leading figure of British colonialism, changed its name to Zimbabwe at independence. The Philippines, named after Philip II, the power-hungry Spanish king, has been campaigning a long-running movement to change the name of the country to Maharlika.

- ① make more money

- ③ break from the past
- ④ expand the territory
- ⑤ attract foreign tourists

26. A person's age no longer tells you anything about his or her social position, marriage or health. There's no longer a particular year in which one goes to school, goes to work, gets married, or starts a family. It doesn't surprise us to hear of an 18-year-old president of a company or a 70-year-old freshman in a university. In fact, the social clock that keeps us on time and tells us when to go to school, get a job, or stop working isn't as strong as it used to be. In short, it doesn't sound proper any longer to _____.

- ① mention a person's social status
- ② ask young people to be punctual
- ③ urge our children to be more polite
- ④ advise anybody to act his or her age
- ⑤ ask a stranger where he or she is from

27. Niagara Falls is one of the most spectacular sights I have ever seen. The roar of six million cubic feet of water each minute makes it the most powerful waterfall in North America. Few people, however, know that more than 50 percent of the river's water is diverted through four huge tunnels before it reaches those falls. This water passes through hydroelectric turbines that supply power to nearby areas in the U.S. and Canada before returning to the river well past the Falls. The case of Niagara Falls can be applied to our lives. Just as we admire the splendid Niagara Falls, we tend to value things just by their spectacular appearance. But the diverted water that passes the tunnels is more useful to us. We should _____.

[3점]

- ① utilize water for tourism, not for energy
- ② remember that power cannot last forever
- ③ develop new ways of generating electricity
- ④ cherish invisible but helpful elements in life
- ⑤ make an endless effort to achieve our goals

32. We take it for granted that pictures are something we perceive and understand intuitively. When parents read picture books to their children, they are seldom conscious of the language learning involved in the process. But as parents read picture books to children, typically they point at the picture and mention the name of the object at the same time. In this way, children are trained to look at the picture, learn the name of the depicted object, and understand the relationship between the picture and the real object. Every person who has read a picture book to children knows that it is often the small details that interest children. It is around these details that a conversation between adults and children starts.

- ① conversational topics for kids
- ② precious time spent with parents
- ③ language learning through picture books
- ④ reading bedside stories to children
- ⑤ visual aids for drawing pictures

33. Around the world, billions of dollars worth of food gets thrown out each year. It's not just the money that's being wasted. It's also the resources that went into making the food that's being wasted. So, how can we deal with it? It's simple. Look into the refrigerator before you go shopping and figure out what's left behind, what went bad and why you didn't eat the food. It's all right to do a big monthly shop of durables. However, when you buy your fresh fruit and vegetables, it's better to buy them every couple of days so they don't sit in the fridge unused.

Nowadays people are so absorbed in themselves that they will not go out of their way to help fellow citizens in danger. Whether it is a person lying in the street unconscious or someone getting robbed, people will look the other way because they don't want to get involved in any trouble. Most people will just pretend not to see anything even if there is a crime in progress. As long as it doesn't directly affect them, people will rarely try to stop a crime. However, if the person in danger is your father, mother, sister or brother, can you possibly just pass by? Just remind yourself that the other person's shoe can be on your foot.

The above chart shows the percentages of online seeking and actual purchasing in four categories. ① In general, people use the Web for information seeking much more than actual purchasing. ② In all categories, more than 60% of people use the Web to seek product information. ③ The dependence on online seeking is greater when people arrange their travel than when they buy CDs. ④ The gap between online seeking and purchasing is the greatest in the category of books and magazines. ⑤ The percentage of the people who purchase electronic goods is less than half the percentage of the people who search the item online.

36. The Smurfs에 관한 다음 글의 내용과 일치하는 것은?

The Smurfs are a fictional group of small blue creatures who live in Smurf Village somewhere in the woods. The Belgian cartoonist Peyo introduced them to the world in a series of comic strips in 1958. He called them Les Schtroumpfs; later they became known worldwide as the Smurfs. Most of them are male, and wear white trousers with a hole for their short tails and white hats. Each has a unique characteristic, which is related to his or her name. All Smurfs with the exception of Papa, Baby, Nanny and Grandpa are said to be 100 years old. The Smurfs became an animated cartoon in 1981, when their debut on U.S. television launched their global rise to stardom.

37. Tristan da Cunha에 관한 다음 글의 내용과 일치하지 않는 것은?

Tristan da Cunha is a group of remote volcanic islands in the south Atlantic Ocean between southern Africa and South America. The best way to get to Tristan da Cunha is by taking a fishing boat out of Cape Town, South Africa. Tristan was discovered by a Portuguese Admiral, Tristao da Cunha, in 1506, and is named after its discoverer. It has been under the control of the United Kingdom since 1816. The most significant event in Tristan's recent history was the 1961 volcanic eruption. It caused the entire population to move to the U.K. After two years in the U.K., almost all of the 264 Tristanians returned to their island.

38. Economists say that if the energy prices go up, the demand decreases. However, consumers are actually not very sensitive to energy price rises. Even if the energy prices go up, they will still need to cook, and to light and heat their homes. So they will complain but pay more rather than cut the amount of energy they use. In the same way, if they need the car to go to work or take children to school, they will not drive any less even though fuel costs more. Instead, they will cut back on other things, like holidays, clothes or eating out.

39. You are not reading if you are not understanding, no matter how fast you go. To understand the meanings of words, dictionaries are the most important tool. So, students are always told to use a dictionary. The sooner you begin to use the dictionary at a moment's hesitation, the easier your reading will become. The more you read and look up words, the more you'll understand and the easier the whole process will become. Remember, while the context often will show you the approximate meaning of the word you encounter, only a good dictionary will give you the precise definition. So, use your dictionary and be certain of your words. This is a fundamental rule of all reading. [1점]

The scholars also claim Netspeak is not harming, but actually helping the language.

Many educators are concerned that Netspeak, the language young people use on the Internet, is corrupting English. (①) Language scholars say, however, languages cannot be corrupted; they simply change. (②) It develops new forms of creative language use, which provide many young people with a strong motivation for literacy. (③) It also encourages young people to write more than ever before, which makes them get better at writing. (④) Still, language scholars do say that standard writing skills should be taught in schools. (⑤) They add that students should know when to use and when not to use Netspeak.

41. If the other person is in a rage, you need to be calm enough for both of you. Your calmness can be as infectious as his or her anger. In the modern age of email, the most tempting button on the computer screen is "reply." When the other reacts to our No with an angry email, we may be tempted to hit the "reply," compose a retort thoughtlessly, and send it right away, which can rapidly escalate the conflict out of control. The best button on the screen you can use in such a case is "save as draft." Compose your reply, save it, and then look at it an hour later or, better yet, after a good night's sleep. Then ask yourself what response will best serve your interests.

42. Researchers have created a new technique that involves coating windows with special chemical dyes. The windows would look like smoked glass because of the dyes, which help trap the light from the sun and send it to special storage cells that then convert the light into electricity. The new discovery could transform buildings into energy plants, and the windows in our houses could power our homes. The scientists say their dyes can produce ten times more power than the traditional solar panels used around the world today. The grey skies were threatening to rain over Yankee Stadium, as if they were going to ruin the annual event, as all the players walked onto baseball's most famous field. Their families, including little sons and daughters, followed them. Cameras flashed from everywhere. Fans chanted in the stands, waving flags and whistling horns. Players responded to this by throwing balls to them. The juniors of the players, wearing uniforms with their fathers' names inscribed, skipped and ran around the outfield, laughing and shouting. Mariano Rivera stood surrounded by his three boys, all in new American League uniforms. Joe Girardi and his son were wearing matching outfits, even down to the sunglasses. Though shaking hands is the main form of physical contact, you have no knowledge of what the other person has been touching before you meet them. In a study, researchers say that while people avoid kissing each other when they have a cold, they are more likely to pass on an infection by shaking someone's hand. The study also details how germs that cause stomach infections such as salmonella can also circulate directly from person to person on the hands. Last week more than three million people were too sick for work as flu swept through the country and the health experts say much more people will have been infected after touching someone else's hands. They suggest that the "air kiss," which avoids contact altogether, is probably the best option.

(A) An old story is told of a king in Africa who had a close friend with whom he grew up. (a) The friend had a habit of looking at every situation that ever occurred in his life and remarking, "This is good!"

(B) About a year later, the king was hunting in an area that he should have stayed away from. Cannibals captured him and took him to their village. They tied his hands, piled some wood, set up a stake and bound him to the stake. As they came near to set fire to the wood, they noticed that (b) the captured man didn't have a thumb. Being superstitious, they never ate anyone that was less than whole. So untying the king, they sent him on his way.

(C) One day the king and his friend were out on a hunting expedition. The friend loaded and prepared the guns for the king. The friend had apparently done something wrong in preparing one of the guns, for after taking the gun from his friend, the king fired it and his thumb was blown off. Examining the situation, the friend remarked as usual, "This is good!" Hearing this, the king replied, "No, this is not good!" and sent (c) him to jail.

(D) As he returned home, he was reminded of the event that had taken his thumb and felt sorry for his treatment of his friend. He went immediately to the jail to speak with (d) the prisoner. "You were right," he said, "It was good that my thumb was blown off." And he told the friend all that had happened. "I am very sorry for sending you to jail for so long. I was a bad man to do such a thing." "No," his friend replied, "this is good!" "What do you mean, 'This is good'? How could it be good that I sent my friend to jail for a year?" "If I had not been in jail," (e) the wise man replied, "I would have been with you."

Person A Because of the benefits hybrid cars can give, more and more people are buying them. Why is it that people prefer getting a hybrid car? The answer to this is (A) _____. People are thinking of the long term benefits that a hybrid car can give. Hybrid cars will be able to give you maximum fuel efficiency. With a hybrid car, you can get more than 60 miles to the gallon of gasoline. This is because hybrid cars run on two engines. One is the conventional engine and the other is the electric motor and batteries. By combining these two to power your car, it will run far more efficiently than conventional cars. Nobody could resist the temptation to buy such a nice car.

Person B It is often said that hybrid cars are the cars of the future. People have been purchasing hybrid cars because of their fuel efficiency. However, hybrid cars raise the concern of (B) _____. The main advantage of hybrid cars is the electric motor, but it is also their disadvantage. When a hybrid car is involved in an accident, it will be difficult for the rescuers to get you out of the car because of the dangers of electric shock. Hybrid cars carry large amounts of voltage. In an accident, wires from the battery may tear off and will be potentially dangerous to handle. For this reason, you should think twice before purchasing a hybrid car.
