This is a great aid when the geography of an area is uncertain. It was first used by the military to locate troops and tanks. It can tell where a missile or aircraft is. What began as a military application is now finding a rapidly growing civilian market. Fishermen at sea, hikers on remote trails, and even rental cars are equipped with it. A signal is transmitted to a satellite and then to a website that allows someone to track something. It is now included in many cell phones and in certain brands of cars. It is also used by drivers to get directions.

A musician played a beautiful medley of Mackie's favorite songs and nursery rhymes on the piano. Mackie's grandmother began reading a passage from one of Mackie's books, but got too sorrowful to continue. So Mackie's father put his arm around his mother and finished reading it for her: "We've shared all the little things a family shares, but mostly we've shared love. And this is what you'll remember, because love never leaves us. It's what we take with us wherever we go."

Last week, Mr. Jackson, the janitor, captured a rat in the girl's locker room. He said it probably came from that vacant lot two blocks from the school. We have to clean up that area to keep our school and our neighborhood safe from mice and possible injury. I'm looking for a few good volunteers for April 16, National Youth Service Day. What better time is it to do our part to improve our neighborhood? By volunteering, you can help improve our community.

When something goes differently than we planned or when something difficult pops up unexpectedly, we may allow ourselves to feel the anger that comes along as a result. We may also allow ourselves to express our feelings to only one person who will not judge but just listen. But remember this. When you complain, your mind will focus on the negative aspects of your life. When things don't go as you planned, think about things that have gone right in your life. By remembering past positive moments, your mind will accept what has just happened and allow you to move on.

As Christmas drew near, the shop was crowded with many people. My only anxiety was that I would lose my job in January and return to the hard task of job-hunting. Then, miraculously, from a word or two dropped here and there, I began to feel that this might not happen after all. One afternoon I heard my boss say to Mr. McCallum, "Tell me about the little runner. I like her. She's a cheerful child." Part of the reply reached me before I went out. "Yes." Mr. McCallum said, "She's a good girl. I've been meaning to propose keeping her on." That was all, but it was enough to send me home rejoicing.

28. Apparently, women's domination in the labor market is caused by a number of advantages that only women can generate. Women don't care about how big companies they work for while men prefer to work at widely known firms. _____, women don't mind working part time in a variety of jobs ranging from supermarket cashiers to office workers, whereas men try to get full time jobs only. Women also spend more time preparing for English tests such as TOEIC, job interviews, and individual presentations than men.

29. Grouping things together that are alike makes it easier for us to find them, and easier to add similar new things to the group. Would you find frozen french fried potatoes in the snack food aisle? No, although both french fried potatoes and potato chips have potatoes as ingredients. Frozen french fries, unlike chips, need to be kept in the freezer section. Moreover, french fries are considered a dinner food and chips a snack food. So we put them in different places in the grocery store. We group things together or separate them according to certain similarities or differences. When we group things together because they are alike in certain ways, we are _____ them.

The cells in a plant's leaves are flattened to catch the maximum amount of sunlight they use to make food.

31. Television is not real life. In real life, people actually have to leave the coffee shop and go to jobs. You need to know the difference between an illusion and a reality. Korean videos have happy endings in most, if not all. In reality, they are an illusion. Many human relations end more unhappily than happily. Free gifts are an illusion. In reality, you have to pay for them one way or another. Cutting taxes for everyone's benefit is an illusion. In reality, the reduced revenue will lower somebody's earnings at least in the short run. Whatever you do, there is a cost involved. Therefore, in economics, we often say that _____.

32. 다음 밑줄 친 문장에서 full bath에 대해 필자가 질문한 내용과 다섯 번째 중개인이 이해한 내용을 바르게 짝지은 것은?

In my real estate office, there sometimes was confusion about the terms used to describe features in homes. Most of us who worked there considered a half-bath to be a room with a toilet and a basin. A three-quarter bath would include a toilet, a basin and a shower stall, and a full bath would have a toilet, a basin and a bathtub. One afternoon, four of us were debating this subject when a fifth agent walked in. Hoping he'd agree with me, I asked, "What do you consider a full bath?" "Oh," he said, "about eight people."

34. 다음의 'I'에 관한 내용과 일치하지 않는 것은?

I have been waiting a long time for the 2006 World Cup. Breaking my arm in training just before the 2002 competition prevented me from playing in Korea/Japan. It was an unfortunate event that I want to forget completely by playing my best in the next World Cup. On the other hand, I will never forget the joy that I felt, when my team went on to the semifinals in 2002. 35. Carolyn Meyer에 관한 설명 중, 글의 내용과 일치하는 것은?

Carolyn Meyer became a writer before she even knew how to talk. When she was six months old, her father began a diary for her. In the diary, he wrote what time she woke up, what she ate, and what her parents were doing each day. She still treasures the diary. As a child, Ms. Meyer was very shy and not athletic. "I couldn't do anything, like catching a ball or hitting it, or running enough to beat anybody anywhere," she remembers. Ms. Meyer had a vivid imagination and often used writing to escape to her own world. As a professional writer, Ms. Meyer writes both fiction and nonfiction. She has spent much time in New Mexico, and the influence of the Southwest comes through in much of her writing.

36. We worry when our youngster is unwilling to follow our advice. Is there anything for us to do for our children? Plenty, according to Sanford Dornbusch, professor of sociology at Stanford University. "Parents often think that when a kid enters his teens, they can have little influence over him," Dornbusch says. "But kids continually need to have their parents' voices ringing in their ears." Dornbusch's research shows that kids who follow their peers in minor concerns like clothes and music still turn to their parents in important matters like education and codes of behavior.

37. Comparing is cancerous. Comparing yourself to others is nothing but bad news. Why? Because we're all on different development timetables; socially, mentally, and physically. Since we all bake cakes differently, we shouldn't keep opening the oven door to see how well our cake is rising compared to our neighbor's, or our own cake won't rise at all. Although some of us are like the poplar tree, which grows like a weed the moment it's planted, others are like the bamboo tree, which shows no growth for four years but then grows ninety feet in year five.

Leonardo da Vinci was inspired by the writings of Roman architect, Vitruvius. Leonardo created this drawing showing how the laws governing the proportions of the human form relate to the laws governing geometric forms. Vitruvius wrote that if a perfectly proportioned man lay on his ① back with his hands and feet ② stretched out, his navel would be at the ③ center of a circle while his fingers and toes would ④ touch the edge. If he kept his legs together and stretched his arms out horizontally, his toes and fingers would touch the edge of a ⑤ circle. This is exactly what Leonardo drew. Look at Leonardo's drawing and see how the man's fingers and toes touch the outlines of the circle and square.

Select your topic early in the week, think over it, sleep over it, and dream over it. Discuss it with your friends. Make it a topic of conversation. Ask yourself all possible questions concerning it. Put down on pieces of paper all thoughts and illustrations that come to you and keep reaching out for more. Ideas, suggestions, and illustrations will come drifting to you at all times—when you are bathing, when you are driving downtown, and when you are waiting for dinner to be served.

42. The Internet is based on technology known as “packet switching.” Packet switching involves breaking down computer information into bits of information called packets. Next, the packets are switched across a network using two computer protocols. Transmission Control Protocol(TCP) and Internet Protocol(IP) work together to move these packets through the network. The packets use the path through the network allowing them to get to their destination most quickly. Once the destination is reached, the packets are put back together and the information is received.

43. To a large degree, the measure of our peace of mind is determined by how much we are able to keep our attention on the here and now. Many people live as if life were a dress rehearsal for some later date. It isn't. In fact, no one has a guarantee that he or she will be here tomorrow. Now is the only time we have, and the only time that we have any control over. When our attention is in the present moment, we push fear from our minds. To make peace with yourself and to combat fear, the best strategy is to learn to bring your attention back to the present.

Since having a blog has become so common, an increasing number of entertainers are running them. “As keeping the public’s attention is vital for a successful career as an entertainer, personal blogs can be a necessary thing for entertainers to communicate better with their fans and help their images better.” said Lee, a media expert. On the other hand, he pointed that stars who own blogs always face the risk of controversy and cyber attacks since every word they write is watched by fans and random blog users, as well as media. “Thus, it is difficult for stars to freely express their own personal thoughts. Even making a joke in their blogs can cause other people to make bad use, as you know.” he said.

Entertainers’ personal blogs can be a tool not only to _____ (A) _____ their friendly images, but also to permit others to _____ (B) _____ them.

[46 ~ 48] 두 사람의 대립된 의견을 읽고, 물음에 답하시오.

Person A: No one likes to pay taxes, but governments cannot provide necessary services without money. Lotteries, however, are a way of raising voluntary contributions. Unlike taxes, no one is forced to pay but everyone is free to donate whatever he wishes. The lottery is fun and financially painless, and it gives people hope for a better future for themselves. The lottery is a win-win situation: the government raises funds for important projects, and the people who voluntarily join in can enjoy themselves while contributing to society.

Person B: The simple fact is: taxes are efficient, lotteries are not. Most of the lottery gains are spent on administering the lottery itself, not on their advertised purpose. Society hardly benefits at all. A second problem is that the people who participate most actively in the lottery are the very ones who can least afford it financially; most of them will never win, so they end up worse off than if they did not buy lottery tickets. But even more important than these economic issues is _____: How can a government prevent gambling on the one hand while actively encouraging it on the other?

(A)

Some people are better at loving their pets than people. But to love (a) a pet unconditionally is hard too. What happens when your dog wakes you up with unnecessary barking in the middle of the night or ruins your favorite carpet with an accident? Do you love him just as much?

(B)

One of the goals of spiritual life and one of the requirements of inner peace is to learn to love unconditionally. The problem is, it's really hard to love (b) a person, any person, unconditionally. The person we are trying to love inevitably says the wrong thing, or fails to meet our expectations in some way. So, we get upset and put conditions on (c) our love: "I'll love you, but you have to change. You must act the way I want you to act."

(C)

A plant, however, is easy to love just the way it is. Select (d) a plant and love it whether it blooms or not, whether it lives or dies. Just love it. Notice how you feel as you offer this plant your unconditional love. Soon, you'll be able to extend your (e) loving-kindness beyond your plant as well. As you notice how good it feels to love, see if you can offer a similar love to the people in your life. Love them just the way they are. Have your own wonderful teacher showing you the power of love.
