Instruments in the percussion family are played by being struck, shaken, or scraped. Among percussion instruments, they are made from two large, slightly concave metal plates. They are fitted with leather hand straps and are shaped so that when they are crashed together, only the edges touch. When they are scraped against one another, they produce a pleasing metallic sound. Although they are untuned instruments, they produce a wide range of sound effects. Some of them are so small that they can be played with just the fingers. They are also played with sticks while suspended on a string or a stand.

Note taking is one of the activities by which students attempt to stay attentive, but it is also an aid to memory. "Working memory," or "short-term memory" is a term (A) used / using to describe the fact that one can hold only a given amount of material in mind at one time. When a lecturer presents a succession of new concepts, students' faces begin to show signs of anguish and frustration; some write furiously in their notebooks, while (B) other / others give up writing in complete discouragement. Note taking thus is dependent on one's ability to maintain attention, understand what is being said, and hold it in working memory long enough to (C) write down it / write it down.

Is quicksand for real? Yes, but it's not as deadly as it is in the movies. Quicksand forms when sand gets mixed with too much water and ① becomes loosened and soupy. It may look like normal sand, but if you were to step on it, the pressure from your foot would cause the sand ② to act more like a liquid, and you'd sink right in. Pressure from underground sources of water would separate and suspend the granular particles, ③ reduced the friction between them. In quicksand, the more you struggle, the ④ deeper you'll sink. But if you remain still, you'll start to float. So if you ever do fall into quicksand, remember to stay calm, and don't move until you've stopped ⑤ sinking.

These days, e-mail is thought to be one of the most effective ways to communicate. However, it can be a highly flawed communication vehicle in a workplace setting. ① Some people use it inappropriately to avoid confrontation or to pass secrets among their friends. ② Some employees can say things in e-mail that they would never say to someone's face. ③ To make matters worse, e-mail is likely to be misunderstood. ④ E-mail is a system for transmitting messages and computer files electronically. ⑤ Because e-mail lacks the tone, inflection, and body language of the communicator, a message may be interpreted wrongly by the receiver.

24. I see that my husband was simply engaging the world in a way that many men do: as an individual in a hierarchical social order in which he was either one-up or one-down. In this world, conversations are negotiations in which people try to achieve and maintain the upper hand. Life, then, is a contest, a struggle to preserve independence and avoid failure. I, on the other hand, was approaching the world as an individual in a network of connections. In this world, conversations are negotiations for closeness in which people try to seek and give confirmation and support, and to reach consensus. Life, then, is a community, a struggle to preserve intimacy and avoid isolation. Though there are hierarchies in this world too, they are hierarchies more of _____ than of power and accomplishment.

However, heroes of everytime and culture must _____ along the way if they journey forth to do what heroes must do. Myth and folk tale heroes are called upon to take up a quest, or journey, just as each human being must journey through life. The journey is a test of courage, will and character and the challenges come in the form of monsters and evil gods, or temptations and inner struggles.

26. Our survival in the everyday world requires us to perform thousands of small tests without failure. Nevertheless, too great an adherence to the belief “to err is wrong” can greatly undermine your attempts to generate new ideas. If you’re concerned with producing right answers rather than generating original ideas, you’ll bypass the germinal phase of the creative process. Thus, you’ll spend little time testing assumptions, challenging the rules, asking what-if questions, or just playing around with the problem. All of these techniques will produce some incorrect answers, but in the germinal phase errors are viewed as a(n) _____.

27. The best way to read fiction is to mix one’s reading, neither to favor the present at the expense of the past nor to favor the past at the expense of the present. And do not think contemporary work will appear thin and trivial compared with the great work of the past. It is not necessarily so at all. As a professional reader, I have to try to keep side by side with contemporary fiction while constantly widening and deepening my knowledge of the fiction of earlier times. I’m continually turning from the most vital work of our time to the classic novels, and I find no opposition between them. That is, _____.

True freedom is found in doing the things that scare us the most. Take a leap and you will find life, not lose it. Don't make fear a permanent part of your life: letting it go, or at least living in spite of fear, surprisingly and paradoxically, takes you to a place of safety. You can learn to love without hesitation, to speak without caution, and to care without self-defensiveness. Once we are on the other side of our fears, we find new life. As Helen Keller said, "Life is either a daring adventure or it's nothing." If we can learn this lesson, we can lead a life of awe and wonder.

34. Leftovers may be the best thing about holiday diners. For most Americans, eating them from a holiday meal is as traditional as the meal itself. But treat these leftovers with care, or you could get sick. If you decide to reinvent your holiday meal, take these steps to help ensure it's as safe as it is delicious. The worst mistake is keeping food out too long. When storing, you want leftovers to quickly cool to 40°F or below. Shallow airtight containers are better than foil or plastic bags. Chop meats to get the temperature down faster. Pack perishable lunch foods in a sealed bag and throw it in an ice pack to make sure foods stay properly chilled.

- ④ inventing new recipes for holiday dinners

35. Most of our misconceptions about art arise from the confusion we might have in the use of the words "art" and "beauty." We always assume that all that is beautiful is art, or that all art is beautiful, that what is not beautiful is not art, and that ugliness is the negation of art. This identification of art and beauty is at the bottom of all our difficulties in the appreciation of art. And even in highly aesthetic people, this assumption acts like an unconscious censor in particular cases when art is not beauty. So we must remember that art is not necessarily beauty: that cannot be said too often.

37. Mark Plotkin에 관한 다음 글의 내용과 일치하지 않는 것은?

Mark Plotkin is an ethnobotanist who became fascinated with the native culture of Suriname, South America. In the course of his fieldwork, Plotkin helped a Suriname shaman, who was also his mentor, collect and document hundreds of types of medicinal plants. Some elements of these medicinal plants had effects similar to those of painkillers found in frogs and anti-tumor agents derived from snake venom. Plotkin directed a non-profit group, which set up shamans' apprentice clinics next to clinics run by missionaries. This gave apprentices the opportunity to pass on the shamans' medicine to the world at large. Plotkin's work earned him praise from the United Nations and the title "Hero of the Planet" from Time Magazine.

38. Years ago, I went into a government building that had two sets of double doors spaced about fifteen feet apart. For security reasons, when I went through the first set of doors, I had to let them close tightly before the next set of doors would open in front of me. As long as I stayed at the first set of doors, the second set would not open. In many ways, life operates in a manner similar to those automatic doors. Step forward into the future, knowing there's nothing you can do about past disappointments. Where you are going is more significant than where you came from or where you have been. If you have the right attitude, you will give birth to more in the future than you've lost in the past.

39. When something doesn't meet our expectations, many of us operate this assumption, "When in doubt, it must be someone else's fault." You can see this assumption in action almost everywhere you look — something is missing, so someone else must have moved it. This type of blaming thinking has become extremely common in our culture. But, in terms of personal happiness, you cannot be peaceful while at the same time blaming others. Blaming others takes an enormous amount of mental energy. It's a "drag-me-down" mind-set that creates stress and disease. Blaming makes you feel powerless over your own life because your happiness is contingent on the actions and behaviors of others, which you can't control.

Aaron didn't say anything, but when the next pitch came he hit it into the left-field bleachers.

There is a story involving Yogi Berra, the well-known catcher for the New York Yankees, and Hank Aaron, who at that time was the chief power hitter for the Milwaukee Braves. ( ② ) He intended to cheer up his teammates on the one hand and irritate the Milwaukee batters on the other. ( ③ ) As Aaron came to the plate, Yogi tried to irritate him by saying, "Hank, you're holding the bat wrong. You're supposed to hold it so you can read the trademark." ( ④ ) After rounding the bases and tagging up at home plate, Aaron looked at Yogi Berra and said, "I didn't come up here to read." ( ⑤ )

41. When it comes to buying clothes, shoppers can feel overwhelmed by the choices. Now dressing rooms equipped with cameras and interactive displays could lead to intelligent fitting rooms. They connect shoppers to a social fashion network, where they could see themselves and others wearing different outfits. In the intelligent fitting room, the shopper sees a mirror flanked by displays. Directly in front, she sees herself in the actual mirror. To the left of the mirror, she sees herself on a display wearing the outfit she tried on previously. To the right of the mirror, she sees another display showing images of other people wearing similar clothes or completely different styles. This allows her to compare multiple outfits at the same time.

42. There has probably been a time when you've gone into someone's study or workroom and thought, "This place works! No wonder she's so productive. Anyone would be up for learning and creativity in this environment." The right learning place can do the same thing for you. It can be anything from an elaborate office in your house to a room in your apartment or a corner of your bedroom. However modest at the start, a comfortable learning place is an important step in taking command of your own growth. When asked, "What does a woman need in order to be able to write?" Virginia Woolf responded with a phrase that became the title of one of her books: "A room of one's own."

The rush and pace of business grew fiercer and faster. On the floor they were pounding half a dozen stocks in which Peter's customers were heavy investors. Orders to buy and sell were coming and going as swift as the flight of swallows. Some of his own holdings were imperilled. With the proper decision and act ready and prompt as clockwork, Peter was working like some high-gear, delicate, strong machine—strung to full tension, going at full speed, accurate, never hesitating. Stocks and bonds, loans and mortgages, margins and securities — here was a world of finance.

About fifty years ago a Pygmy named Kengo took his first trip out of the dense, tropical forests of Africa and onto the open plains in the company of an anthropologist.

Individuals and groups are engaged in the work of forming and refining their identities throughout their life spans. But it is in adolescence that the largest part of this work is accomplished. And look at the pride or narcissism that is involved. It is normal for adolescents to be extremely preoccupied with how they look. Even though their clothes may appear either careless and slovenly or otherwise outrageous to their parents, to adolescents they are extremely important. When they try them on, they are trying on various identities. They spend endless hours looking at themselves in the mirror, good or bad. As they look in those mirrors, they are in a very real way trying to figure out who they are, seeking to discern an identity in those reflections.

(A) One day a math teacher asked her students to list the names of the other students in the room on a sheet of paper. Then she told them to write down (a) the nicest thing they could say about each of their classmates. As the students left the room, each one handed in the papers. That Saturday, the teacher wrote down the name of each student on a separate sheet of paper, and listed what everyone else had said about that individual.

(B) Years later, Joe, one of her students, died in Vietnam and she attended the funeral. After the funeral his father came to speak with her. "We want to show you something," said his father. Opening his billfold, he carefully removed a worn piece of paper. On the paper was (b) all the remarks Joe's classmates had made about him. "Thank you for your thoughtfulness," Joe's father said.

(C) All of Joe's former classmates started to gather around her. Chuck said, "I put mine in my wedding album." Charlie smiled and said, "I have cherished (c) the treasure I got from my classmates. (D) On Monday, she gave each student a sheet of paper with (d) comments from other students. Before long, the entire class was smiling. She never knew if they discussed their own lists after class or with their parents, but it didn't matter. The exercise had accomplished its purpose. That group of students moved on.

Person A Concern over the environmental impact of burning fossil fuels has helped spur interest in an alternative fuel. As for this issue, I strongly believe that we should choose biomass as an alternative fuel. Biomass is plant-derived material usable as a renewable energy source which does not deplete existing supplies. It contains almost no sulfur, little ash, and gives off few pollutants, so it is very clean. Another good point is that it is readily available and in large supply because plants are probably one of the richest resources in the world. Most of all, biomass technology is simple, so biomass can be burned as easily as coal and liquefied even more easily than coal. I believe one day it will replace fossil fuels.

Person B Some people argue that we should use biomass as alternative energy. They insist that biomass fuels are clean, readily available, and easily converted into gas or liquid form. However, I think they ignore the fact that biomass has low efficiency, resulting in high production costs. One-third to two-thirds of energy is lost in most biomass conversion. The low conversion rates of biomass lead to burning more plants, generating much more carbon dioxide and pollution gases. I am convinced that this fact is strongly against the idea that biomass is clean energy. The low efficiency also requires substantial amounts of land, which will increase the possibility that biomass fuel crops will eventually _____.
